Rep. Brostoff to Speak at New Politics Conference in Washington, D.C. This Weekend

“Our democracy benefits when civic-minded people help drive the conversation.”

MILWAUKEE - State Rep. Jonathan Brostoff (D-Milwaukee) released the following statement in anticipation of this weekend’s New Politics conference in Washington, D.C.:

“I am both honored and excited to participate in this weekend’s New Politics conference in Washington, D.C. as a featured guest alongside my Assembly colleagues David Bowen and David Crowley. In an era where, all too often, people see a political career as a way to personally get ahead, New Politics is doing the incredibly important work of putting public service back into politics. By recruiting and supporting veterans and public service alumni as they enter the political arena, New Politics recognizes that our democracy benefits when civic-minded people, no matter their ideological background, help drive the conversation.”

New Politics, founded in 2013 by AmeriCorps City Year alumna Emily Cherniack, makes it their mission to support veterans and national service alumni who seek to continue their public service through politics. Since it was founded, New Politics has helped develop and support nearly 40 elected officials and candidates across the country from both sides of the political aisle.

“My Public Allies AmeriCorps service in Milwaukee was a foundational experience in both my political and personal life, and I am extremely proud to be able to share my story with a new generation of talented individuals who are ready to give back to their communities through politics.”
