Madison- Several bills authored by Rep. Mary Felzkowski (R-Irma) regarding regulations that govern overnight recreational camps were signed into law by Governor Evers earlier today.

“There are recreational camps tucked throughout the Northwoods that bring campers from dozens of countries here to experience our beautiful natural resources and grow fond memories of Wisconsin that last a lifetime,” shared Rep. Felzkowski, “These camps not only teach children independence, social skills, and love of the outdoors, they also bring in millions of dollars in rural tourism revenue and employ hundreds of local residents. Our package of bills alleviates the duplicative and burdensome regulations these camps undergo, ensuring their continued success.”

One of the bills addresses onerous commercial building code regulations and the other bill allows for camps to use electronic recordkeeping for health records, removing an antiquated bound-book requirement that they currently have to follow.

Rep. Felzkowski is proud of the coalition of legislators who worked with her to advocate for these changes and the bipartisan effort in moving this package through the legislative process.
