State Budget Action to Provide Tax Cuts for WI Families

Madison, WI – Yesterday, the Republican majorities in the Wisconsin State Assembly and Senate announced the tax plan for the 2021-23 state budget. The plan will come before the Legislature’s Joint Committee on Finance and is expected to be approved by the Committee for inclusion in the overall state budget.

After discovering that Wisconsin would see $4.4 billion more in state revenue than expected, this plan includes a $3.4 billion middle class tax cut and another historic investment in K-12 schools that meets the requirements to receive billions more in federal relief funding. The estimated tax relief for the average Wisconsin family is $1,200.

“The budget Governor Tony Evers introduced in February this year was 1,846 pages of expanding our government and taking money out of the pockets of hard working Wisconsinites,” said Representative Steffen (R-Howard) “Republicans have been working for the last four months on crafting a realistic, reasonable, and responsible budget. Cutting taxes for the middle class is exactly what we should be doing, not taking money away from them.”

Once the Assembly and Senate have voted to pass the state budget bill, it will be sent to the governor to be signed into law. This budget will constitute the majority of state spending from July 1, 2021 to June 30, 2023.
